

HEROES WHO FELL FOR FREEDOM

Soldiers Give Lives in France

Transferred from Page One

The First Regiment for six years, and in 1917, he was attached to Company C, 109th Infantry, and served with the engineers in France, and another brother, Private Frank Green, is an athletic instructor at Camp Lee, Va. All three are well known in boxing circles here.

Private Frank R. Dunlap, reported wounded in action, was nineteen years old when he joined Company D, 109th Infantry, at Camp Hancock in March 1917. He was a well known boxer, and this is his third time in the hospital.

He has four brothers in the service, one in the army, the other in the navy, and one in the air force. He is now in Italy, and will shortly leave for France. He was taken in with pneumonia in May, and Private Dunlap lived with his mother at 3621 North Hutchinson street, in a letter recently received by her, he states that he is rapidly recovering at a base hospital.

Captain Frank A. Van Horn, wounded in action, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Xanthus Van Horn, 1402 North Fifty-ninth street. He is twenty-five years old, and served his commission at Fort Niagara. He was assigned to the 115th Infantry, organized at Camp Meade, and went overseas as a member of the 109th Infantry, Company D, of that National Army unit. He was formerly a house painter at 1402 North Fifty-ninth street, and was wounded during a scouting expedition.

Corporal George H. Hafner, reported wounded in action, lived with his mother at 3214 North Second street. He enlisted in the First Regiment, National Guard of Pennsylvania, and was assigned to Company I, 109th Infantry, at Camp Hancock. This unit sailed for France early last May, according to his mother, Corporal Hafner is rapidly recovering at a base hospital.

Private Fred M. Patton, wounded, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Patton, 114 North Forty-first street. He enlisted in May of 1917 in the regular army, was trained at Camp Lee, Va., and eventually assigned to Battery B, Twenty-first Field Artillery. The unit went overseas in May of this year. Private Patton is eighteen years old.

Frank Green, severely wounded, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Green, of Juncostown. He enlisted in July of last year and is a member of the 109th Infantry. The father of the young soldier is a Civil War veteran.

Private Alfred M. Campbell, reported wounded in action on the 16th of September, lived with an aunt, Mrs. Anna Campbell, at 3242 North Archer street. He is at present in this country, at Plattburgh, N. Y. After being brought over from the front line, Campbell went to a base hospital, and is now rapidly recovering. He was a member of Company B, 109th Infantry, and was left for France in May last, after a short stay at Camp Hancock. In a letter that he sent to his mother, he said that he expected to be home in two weeks.

Private Edward Mack, reported wounded in action, was a member of Company D, 109th Infantry. He was in the army six years and he served on the Mexican border. He was at one time a well-known Central High School athlete. In a letter he wrote to his mother, he said that he is rapidly recovering in a base hospital.

Private Frank Girard, killed in action, was a member of the 109th Infantry. He was a member of the 109th Infantry, and was killed in action on the 16th of September.

Corporal Hugh J. Cook, of Company B, 109th Infantry, was wounded in action on the 16th of September. He was a member of the 109th Infantry, and was wounded in action on the 16th of September.

Private Robert J. Murphy has been wounded in action, according to word received by his mother, Mrs. Ellen E. Lee, with whom he lives at 3215 Greenway avenue. His parents are dead. He enlisted in Company B, 109th Infantry, in August 1917, and was wounded on September 16. His mother received a postcard dated September 12, in which he falls to make mention of any injury, and she is inclined to believe that a mistake has been made by the War Department. Mrs. Lee's son, John Lee, is at present with Base Hospital Unit No. 10, now in France.

Corporal Charles A. McLean, of Company C, 109th Infantry, was wounded in action on the 16th of September. He was a member of the 109th Infantry, and was wounded in action on the 16th of September.

Private Harry A. Jenks, twenty-five years old, of 102 North Sixth street, enlisted in Company C, First Regiment, N. G. P., in May, 1917. He was wounded on July 30 last, according to word received by his mother, Mrs. Charles Jenks, who is also wounded. He is now in a base hospital, and is recovering. He was a member of the 109th Infantry, and was wounded in action on the 16th of September.

Corporal Philip Patterson, of Company B, 109th Infantry, was wounded in action on the 16th of September. He was a member of the 109th Infantry, and was wounded in action on the 16th of September.

Sergeant Frederick Pole, wounded on July 20, has not yet been informed of the death of his wife, on October 9.

The sergeant was married six months before he went to France. He was a member of the Sixth Regiment, N. G. P., and was in service along the Mexican border.

Mrs. Pole, twenty-two, made her home with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Baker, 6020 Kilmessing avenue. She was taken in with pneumonia and died after a week's illness.

Mrs. Pole received a letter August 23 from her husband, telling of his injuries. The same day official notification reached her from the War Department. He is a member of Company H, 115th Infantry, and formerly resided in Collingdale, Pa.

Relatives have hesitated to write of the death of his wife until they learn that the condition is sufficiently improved to receive the news.

Private Melville, one of six brothers, all in the service of their country, has been wounded in action. They are Irish and they are fighters, said his widowed mother, Mrs. Mary Melville, of 2527 West Harvard street. Only one of them waited to be drafted and he was married, so he had a right to hold back.

Charles, the oldest boy, has been in France for more than two years. The United States was a little slow for him in getting into the war, so he went to Canada almost three years ago and went overseas with the Third Battalion of the Canadian Engineers. Edward, twenty-six years old, is an ambulance driver, at present stationed in Panama.

Daniel, twenty-five years old, enlisted some nine months ago in the 115th Infantry and is in the same company as the wounded boy, Peter. Joseph, twenty-four years old, was drafted a few months ago and is at present overseas with Company M, Fifty-fifth Pioneer Infantry, attached to the Seventy-eighth (New York) Division. Barney, twenty-three years old, is in France with the infantry. Just what regiment the mother does not know, as Barney never wrote as a letter writer, and he is living up to his reputation at present.

Peter, who has been wounded, is the youngest, and has seen the heaviest work in the army. He enlisted in the old Sixth Regiment of the National Guard in the spring of 1916 and went with it to the Mexican border. He is now twenty-two years old.

Private Robert Wilson, reported missing on the official casualty list today, is back in his company, according to a letter received by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Wilson, 127 South Fifty-first street. In this letter, dated September 20, he said: "I came out of the trenches two days ago, and we are treating up behind the lines now. We were under heavy artillery fire. The battlefield is really named 'No Man's Land'—I will never forget my first time under fire. I have been in the first, second and front line trenches. I have had some narrow escapes and I have been very lucky. One time my rifle was blown out of my hand, making a wreck of it, but I picked up another close by and went on."

Private Leslie McKinley, severely wounded in action, is a member of the machine gun battalion of the 115th Infantry. Private McKinley enlisted in August 1917, trained at Camp Hancock, and left for France the following May. He was formerly a machinist at Belding, and lived with his brother, Claude, at 1292 Olive street.

Sergeant Thomas C. Brown, reported wounded, is a member of Company K, 115th Infantry. Word reached his mother, Mrs. Annie R. Brown, 2125 South Sixth street, on October 14. On October 12, however, a letter came from Sergeant Brown saying that he had been gassed and was suffering from shell shock, and was in a base hospital.

Sergeant Brown is twenty years old, and was for four years a member of the National Guard, having been in the Mexican border. He was at Camp Hancock from September till May, when he left for France.

Private Lawrence Delaney, dead of wounds, had been sick about two months, according to his mother, Mrs. Mary Delaney, 1828 Wood street. Private Delaney enlisted in the Pennsylvania National Guard in July, 1917. He was trained in Camp Hancock until May, 1918, and then left for France. He belonged to the 109th Infantry, Company E. He was twenty-four years of age.

Private Harry Lang has been officially reported as severely wounded. But he has written to his brother, John Lang, 2208 Alder street, that he was only slightly injured. Private Lang was formerly a member of the old Third Regiment, N. G. P. He was trained at Camp Hancock and went over last May. He is twenty years of age. Lang is now a member of Company G, 110th Infantry.

Sergeant Albert Z. Myers, Jr., severely wounded, is a member of Company H, 110th Infantry. A younger brother, Elmer, is in the headquarters company of the same regiment. Both enlisted in 1917. They lived with their mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Myers, at 2131 South Lee street.

Private Bernard J. McGlone, wounded July 29, enlisted in March, 1918. He was a member of Company B, 109th Infantry. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter McGlone, 600 North Fifty-fourth street, received a letter from him August 15, in which he said he had been gassed and was also suffering from shell shock, but expected to recover in a short time. He also wrote that he had been over the top three times. Before enlisting, McGlone was a drug clerk. He was a member of the Victoria Catholic Club. He is eighteen years old.

Private Edward A. Gledhill, wounded September 15, was serving his second enlistment in the N. G. P. when he went overseas, although only twenty years old. He served on the Mexican border. He was a member of Company K, 109th Infantry. Three days after he was wounded, his mother, Mrs. Mary E. Gledhill, 657 North Fraser street, received a letter, but no mention was made of his injury, as the letter must have been written some time before. His wound is listed by the War Department as a degree, undetermined. No word has been received from him since he was hurt. He was a P. R. H. brazenman before he went across. His brother, Walter, is in the military police

A third son, William Pohl, an electrician, is in France, working in base hospital No. 23. He received exemption, but could not stay out of the war, so he went over to do construction work.

Private Don McWhorter, of 4827 Florence avenue, was wounded in the neck on September 25, but he writes that he is going to return the compliment to the Kaiser in the same place at the first opportunity. He was born in Clearfield, Pa., but came to this city several years ago, where he was employed as a carpenter. He enlisted in November, 1917, and was sent across in April, after training at Camp Meade and Camp Green. He is twenty-four years old.

Private Thomas Daily, wounded, formerly lived at 124 Kentworth street. His family has moved since he enlisted, however, leaving no forwarding address.

Corporal George Archer, wounded, had just captured a load of German beer and a German band and was opening a letter from home, when a German shell blew the letter (containing a check) to pieces. It also sent the corporal to a hospital with wounds of the shoulder and hip. It was hard luck, this latter part of his experience, as the check was a birthday present from his mother. As a result of the wound, he spent the birthday anniversary on a cot. The capture of the German band and the loss of his letter in a letter to his mother in 1917, however, a letter came from his mother, saying that he had been gassed and was suffering from shell shock, and was in a base hospital.

Sergeant W. C. Bauer, wounded; although he admits that he may be kept in the hospital another month, he makes light of his injuries. In a letter to his wife, at 3725 Aspen street, saying he will be sure to get some more news, he writes: "Here I am in a hospital. I had to while fighting with Company A, 109th Infantry. He was formerly employed at Halder's and was a member of the First Regiment.

Sergeant Joseph B. Kennedy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel B. Kennedy, 5523 Hunter avenue, was wounded, degree undetermined, on September 12, according to an official telegram from the War Department received a week ago.

Kennedy's parents have just received a letter from him, dated September 18, in which he says:

go and get wounded. Tough luck, my mother and I are at it, serious, and I will be well soon."

Sergeant Kennedy is twenty-two years old and a member of Company H, 109th Infantry. He is serving his second enlistment, having enlisted the first time in 1915 for service with the National Guard on the Mexican border.

His brother, Charles S. Kennedy, with the same company, is attending an officers' training camp in France, and will be commissioned a second lieutenant on October 25.

Private Louis Karpava, reported in today's official list as having died of wounds, was officially announced as wounded in a recent casualty list. He was drafted last spring and sent to France after a short stay at Camp Meade, to fill up the ranks of the Eighteenth Regiment of Infantry. He was caught by a high explosive shell early in September and died a few days later. Karpava was a tailor by trade and lived at 807 North Franklin street. A brother, David Karpava, is a member of the Ninth Artillery and is now training at Fort Slocum, New York.

Two years in the desert alone with her husband, residence in small Western towns and large Eastern cities—this is the soil from which has sprung the intimate love of America, so wonderfully expressed by Honoré Willie, novelist and editor. As editor-in-chief of The Delineator, Mrs. Willie gives to her work the enthusiasm of youth directed by wide experience; the wings of genius harnessed to practical common sense.
